London Travel Tips

THE RADAR KEY

Many toilets are accessible through the National Key Scheme (NKS). The key is known as The Radar Key. You can buy a Radar Key online, for instance from Disability Rights UK, for £5. They also offer a list of toilets in the NKS. Some local authorities provide Radar Keys for free - please check with your council.

CAFES, MUSEUMS, GALLERIES, RESTAURANTS, HOTELS, PUBS...

There are plenty of businesses in London which have accessible toilets. If it's a privately owned establishment, such as a restaurant, hotel or pub and you are not a customer, you have to ask whether you can use their accessible toilet.

COMMUNITY TOILET SCHEMES

Since 1999, London has experienced the highest decline in local authority owned public toilets in the country; twice as high compared to the UK as a whole. Some councils have created the Community Toilet Scheme initiative, which encourages local businesses, such as shops, pubs or restaurants to work with the Council to make accessible toilets available to the public. Check with your London council whether they take part in the scheme.

ACCESSIBLE TOILETS ON LONDON UNDERGROUND

Some TfL Underground (Tube), Overground and DLR stations have accessible toilets. You can download an Accessible Toilet map from TfL's website.
